

Passenger Terminal Expo 2008 Middle East Summit

Passenger Terminal Expo 2008 - Middle East Summit is a brand-new, high-level international conference and exhibition for the Middle East region. This inaugural event promises to be an intensive three days where delegates can gather information, exchange ideas and network with some of the airport industry's most knowledgeable and influential speakers from all over the world.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

The three-day international conference will have a focus on the latest developments, concepts and ideas for airport terminals within the rapidly growing and changing Middle East region. It will also mirror the highly acclaimed conference featured at Passenger Terminal Expo in Europe, with speakers selected from the world's leading aviation authorities, airports, airlines, architectural companies and consultancies.

Steve Cornell, Director, Airport Master Plan Program, San Diego County Regional Airport Authority, USA, said,

"Passenger Terminal Expo should be on the top of everyone's list of must attend events. The speakers and vendors that attend truly provide the 'out of the box' thinking needed in this rapidly changing and growing industry."

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION

The exhibition will offer delegates and exhibitors the opportunity to meet and network with the key decision-makers from the region's airports and airlines. The exhibition is also limited to 30 exhibitors and stands are available now on a strict first-come first-served basis.

"I think the conference was a huge success, and provided valuable learning and networking opportunities. A very useful experience with many forward-looking topics of relevance to the aviation sector," said Andy Blackwell, Head of Aviation Security, Virgin Atlantic, UK.

Passenger Terminal Expo 2008 – Middle East Summit is organised by UKIP Media Events who organise 15+ international events per year and produce several award-winning magazines.
